Callier audiologist gets humanitarian award

Jackie Clark, a senior audiologist and faculty member at the Callier Center for Communication Disorders at the University of Texas at Dallas, was recently selected to receive the 2006 Humanitarian Award from the American Academy of Audiology. Since 1998, Dr. Clark and her team of students, retirees and nonaudiology professionals have traveled to Mozambique each year to diagnose hearing impairments, provide free hearing aids, hearing aid support, sign-language tutoring and other services that improve or restore hearing for children. The mission has helped more than 2,000 children.
